

The Bullroarer - Thursday 21st August 2008

Posted by aeldric on August 21, 2008 - 2:17am in The Oil Drum: Australia/New Zealand

Topic: Miscellaneous

I am travelling today, so only a few links. Feel free to add more in the comments below.

I promise a bumper edition tomorrow :-)

aeldric

ABC - Timor Sea oil field development likely

An Adelaide-based petroleum company is looking at developing an oil field in the Timor Sea, about 700 kilometres from Darwin.

As part of an $85 million deal, Stuart Petroleum has bought a stake in the Oliver oil field.

SMH - Presentation to 2008 Australian Geothermal Energy Conference

Herald Sun - Hot rocks power 'within four years'

HOT rocks electricity is touted as the latest solution to climate change - and Australia could have its first super-hot power plant within four years.

Scoop.co.nz - Staged Tidal Power Generation Recommended

A local authority panel is recommending the Minister of Conservation allow staged development of a network of up to 200 underwater turbines – capable of generating enough power for up to 250,000 homes – in the Northern Kaipara Harbour.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.